Scott,

We are nearing the contract capacity on the Airborne Response Support Services (ARSS) contract. The ITC costs were tallied and were at the point I needed to consider increasing the capacity of that Task Order. In so doing I had to evaluate the impact on the total contract value for this sole source extension period. The costs on the contract incurred to date added to the cost estimate to remain on full readiness status to the end of the period of performance will leave only about $50K under the capacity for any new activity. We cannot exceed the cost ceiling on an extension. My recommendation at this time is to inquire to the Region regarding the continued use of ASPECT at the ITC response. If we can end the support for ITC it will leave us roughly the $50K to do emergency response deployments until the end of the current period of performance on May 31st, 2019.

If you would like me to contact the Region to inquire about continued use of ASPECT let me know.
